

SANTA CLARA STATION AREA PLAN

Alternatives Workshop

March 29, 2007

The Santa Clara Station Area Plan process is well-underway. The cities of Santa Clara and San José, in conjunction with the Santa Clara Valley Transportation Authority (VTA), have completed the first phase of analysis for the Station Area Plan. Several reports and community outreach endeavors have been completed, including the Existing Conditions Report, Opportunities and Constraints Working Paper, and Market Assessment; as well as two rounds of stakeholder meetings and the first Community Workshop in August of 2006, which established a “vision” for the plan. The information gathered through these analyses and outreach has laid the foundation for the creation of alternative scenarios for the Station Area Plan.

On Thursday, March 29, community members are invited to join staff from VTA and the cities of Santa Clara and San José for the Santa Clara Station Area Plan Alternatives Workshop. The second in a series of community workshops for the Station Area Plan, this event will focus on Guiding Principles for the Plan and alternative scenarios for Transit-Oriented Development (TOD). (Subsequent workshops will examine a preferred plan describing land use and connectivity; as well as the overall Station Area Plan.) Workshop participants will be involved in hands-on activities to review and comment on concepts and principles presented at the workshop. This input will be used by the planning team to further refine the concepts and design of the Station Area Plan. Please join the planning team in an interactive dialogue at the:
